Newmills Cultural Group

Newmills Cultural Group received seed funding for their community wildlife project, improving 2 hectares of land with a focus on pollinator-friendly plants and wildlife education. With 83 volunteers contributing 257 hours, the project included gardening workshops, a willow dome for children, communal seating, and art celebrating local wildlife. The initiative empowered local people of all ages and abilities, strengthening cross-community ties and fostering a sense of civic pride. The community garden has become a thriving space, benefiting 600 people and enhancing the local environment for both humans and wildlife. The project has been a long-term success, building on previous community efforts.
